

Maria Boyazny Predicts Prices for Credit Assets Will Be Volatile in 2nd Half of 2012 and 2013

LOS ANGELES, May 1, 2012 /PRNewswire/ -- Maria Boyazny, Founder and CEO of MB Global Partners, speaking at the Milken Institute Global Conference in Los Angeles, predicted today that prices for many credit assets will be volatile for the next two years.

"More negative news will continue to come from Europe during the next two years, and global financial institutions will persist with their necessary deleveraging. Many fiscal and monetary measures have already been spent, making additional policy responses more and more challenging over time," said Boyazny.

This produces once-in-a-crisis opportunities for investors with capital. "This is a decade of credit, and we are implementing a number of innovative concepts to capitalize on the global deleveraging process," she added.

MB Global Partners is an innovative multi-manager and direct investment platform for institutional investors focused on an array of credit dislocation and distressed strategies. The platform encompasses all credit asset classes – corporate debt, residential mortgage opportunities, financial institutions recaps and other special situations around the world. Boyazny founded MB Global in partnership with G2 Investment Group, a privately-owned financial services firm established in 2008 by Todd Morley and partners. G2 has over 75 professionals offering investment management, advisory, and other financial services to institutional and high net worth investors around the world.

About G2 Investment Group

Founded in 2008 by Todd Morley and partners. G2 has over 75 professionals offering investment management, advisory, and other financial services to institutional and high net worth clients around the world.

G2 was founded in response to the global financial crisis and the massive market dislocation that ensued, which the firm's founders recognized as an unprecedented opportunity to create an investment platform designed around a distinctive approach to asset allocation. This approach starts with a macro viewpoint on economic growth and inflation trends and then focuses on superior, volatility adjusted returns.

Within this framework, the firm leverages the proven talents of its senior management team and the broad networks of its strategic global partners to design investment products that take advantage of mispriced assets or sectors and then recruit the best investment teams to execute the strategy.
